Irish-Indian war newest fight for Urban Outfitters

Long history of conflict for Philly-based mega successful clothing empire Fledgling designers long been wary of collaborating with company

▶ The clothing empire's headquarters are located at the Navy Yard in South Philadelphia.

▶ Its flagship Center City retail outlet is on Walnut Street near Rittenhouse Square.

The adage "all publicity is good publicity" has proven true for one of Philadelphia's top companies, Urban Outfitters, whose president Richard Hayne recently received the coveted Edward Powell Award as an example of excellence in the city's business community.

But in contrast to civic excellence, Hayne's brand drew the ire of two ethnic groups Tuesday, with Saint Patrick's Day merchandise causing the Ancient Order of Hibernians to threaten a boycott and the use of the word "Navajo" in product descriptions causing the tribe's government to file a trademark infringement lawsuit. The offending Irish items include a trucker hat with a stick figure on all fours vomiting shamrocks that reads "Irish Yoga," and T-shirts emblazoned with shamrocks accompanied by logos such as "Irish I Were Drunk."

▶ Hayne

"We need to get this defamation stopped immediately. Please call, e-mail or demonstrate in front of their stores," president Seamus Boyle wrote on the Hibernians' website.

The Navajo Nation, which holds more than 10 trademarks on products such as clothing and online sales, sent Urban Outfitters a cease and desist order in June for the use of the word in the company's "Navajo" collection. Urban scrubbed from their website all references to the term, which it had been using to describe everything from panties to hip flasks. But they continued to use it in their catalog, retail stores and subsidiary brand Free People, the lawsuit alleges. Free People's website was selling several pieces of vintage jewelry labeled "Navajo" as of yesterday.

Urban Outfitters has continued its march from the small company founded with a few thousand dollars in the 1970s to an empire worth over $700 million.

When big fish eat little fish

During the last several years, Urban Outfitters has faced numerous complaints of plagiarism from independent artists, and more recently, objections to culturally insensitive graphics from certain ethnic groups.

Online marketplaces like buyer-seller website Etsy have become particularly vulnerable to creative plagiarism.

Abby Kessler, co-owner of Smak Parlour four blocks south of Lost + Found, said, "All the jewelry designers I work with say they're afraid to put their stuff on Etsy, because they don't want anyone to copy it."

Though local fashion entrepreneurs and artists are well aware of the stigma, some remain optimistic. "We never have a problem finding great artists in such a creative city," said Kessler, who not only co-owns but also co-designs the products in her boutique. "Independent artists make everything themselves, and that's not something Urban Outfitters can ever do."

Apologetic history

This is not the first time Urban Outfitters has been involved in a controversy alleging discrimination:

- They discontinued a T-shirt reading "Everyone Loves a Jewish Girl," surrounded by dollar signs in 2003 after pressure from the Anti-Defamation League.
- They stopped manufacturing glittery handgun-shaped Christmas tree ornaments in 2007 following the fatal shooting of Philadelphia police officer Chuck Cassidy.
- The company issued an apology in 2007 for marketing keffiyehs as "antiwar" scarves and did the same in 2008 after discontinuing a T-shirt with a Palestinian youth holding a machine gun over the word "Victimized."
- In 2010, Urban Outfitters pulled a shirt reading "Eat Less" from their website after an outcry from eating disorder advocates.

No raw deal for this milk

RIKARD LARMA/METRO

▶ Whole raw milk

The largest raw milk-related disease outbreak in Pennsylvania's history, which sickened 43 people in four states, was traced back to Franklin County's Family Cow farms. But advocates of the product say they have no intention to stop drinking it and purveyors say they've seen no decrease in demand.

"People who are into raw milk are very passionately into it," said Paul Lawler, dairy and meat manager of the Reading Terminal's Fair Food Farmstand, one of the city's leading vendors of raw milk.

He said that the Farmstand carried Family Cow farms raw milk until its voluntary recall in early February, but has not restocked it out of an abundance of caution. They have five other brands to choose from and have seen no decline in sales. "A lot of our customers come from pretty far to buy it because they believe in its different nutritional benefits," he said.

"And it creates economic opportunities for farmers – a dairy farmer who's just selling liquid milk only makes pennies on the dollar, but raw milk is a much more valued product."

A recent study from the Center for Disease Control concluded that the risks of drinking raw milk outweighed its possible benefits, noting that there were 150 times more disease outbreaks linked to unpasteurized milk than pasteurized during the 13-year review.

"It does have some healthy, good bacteria – basically, raw milk is white blood cells and water. It's the first immune system a mother cow gives her baby."
KIMBERLY HARTKE OF THE PRICE FOUNDATION

"Real milk" advocacy group the Weston A. Price Foundation called the information supporting the conclusion "cherry picked" in a press release, noting that dairy products in total comprised an average of 112 food-borne illnesses per year out of almost 24,000.

BRAYDEN SIMMS

POLITICAL WORLDLINESS FOR AN IMPOLITE WORLD

@METROPOLITIK

Mitt Romney won the day on Tuesday (following Santorum's surprise February hat trick) with a pair of much-needed wins against his Republican primary opponents.

Or did he?

In Arizona, at least, Romney carried the day, collecting all 35 delegates in the state's winner-take-all contest. But in Michigan — the candidate's home state, where his father once governed and held an executive position at local job provider AMC — the win was murkier. There, Romney prevailed by a slim 3 percent margin, despite a significant money and ground advantage. And aside from the theoretical effect of his win-mentum, the fact is that the pair will mostly split the state's delegate votes.

So where does that leave us — and them? Pundits are mixed on whether the lack of a delegate majority will force a brokered convention, but next week's Super Tuesday may clear that up. In the meantime, we present some pertinent stats below to help inform your opinions.

Metro does not endorse the opinions of the author, or any opinions expressed on its pages.

GET FED

Sometimes there's only time for the headlines:

- "Does Romney's Wealth Pay Dividends for Santorum?" THE MONKEY CAGE
- "Despite win, Romney still fosters doubts" UTSANDIEGO.COM
- "Arizona Officer Demoted Over Shot-Up Obama Image" NEW YORK TIMES
- "Will Olympia Snowe Join Americans Elect?" DAILY INTEL
- "One soldier, one year: $850,000 and rising" CNN
- "Rule and Ruin: The GOP's Secret Love Affair with Spending" THE DAILY BEAST
- "GOP Candidate Calls Holocaust 'Blackest Lie In History'" HUFFINGTON POST

Election by the numbers

46

Romney won an estimated 46 delegates on Tuesday to Santorum's estimated 13. (The Santorum camp claims 15, but the final count will take a little while to sort out.)

14

Due to GOP sanctions related to Michigan's state party moving its primary to before Super Tuesday, however, only 14 of Romney's estimated 21 Michigan delegates will be able to vote. Likewise for Santorum: Only 12 of his MI delegates can vote at the national convention.

$100,000

Romney handily carried Michigan voters earning $100,000 or more annually — taking this influential demographic by a 14-point margin. On the other hand, Romney lost out among voters making less than $100,000 and those who have not attended college.

1,144

In order to win the nomination, a candidate will have to secure 1,144 delegate votes by the August convention in Tampa — a majority of the total 2,286 delegates. Fox News estimates candidates' current delegate shares as follows: Romney 209, Santorum 96, Newt Gingrich 32 and Ron Paul 19.

COMSTOCK

3 to 1

Democratic voters pulled the lever for Santorum in Michigan by a 3-to-1 margin. Whether that was due to the Santorum camp's controversial robocalls — in which they called Democrats, encouraging them to come out and vote against Romney and, of course, for Santorum — remains unclear. Nearly 10 percent of voters in the open primary identified as Democrat, according to exit polls.

36%

On Super Tuesday — next Tuesday, March 6, 2012 — voters in 10 states will hand out 419 delegates to the Republican candidates, representing more than a third needed by any one candidate to secure the party's nomination. Georgia alone will award 76, which Newt Gingrich — of the perpetual comeback and fall-back-down continuum — hopes to claim, having served as the state's Congressman for 20 years.

THE WORD

Metro's Dorothy Robinson shares her take on the world of gossip @dorothyatmetro dorothy.robinson@metro.us

In memoriam

Jones, ca. 1967

Davy Jones 1945-2012

Monkees singer Davy Jones died of a massive heart attack yesterday at age 66. Known for his theatrical smile, little-boy good looks and cheerful demeanor on the group's hit TV show, Jones was the only Brit in the band full of Americans. His accented delivery of such hits as "Daydream Believer" and "I Wanna Be Free" helped make the group a cuddly commodity in the '60s. Jones and the Monkees would enjoy two great bursts of success, initially in the late '60s and again in the mid-'80s, when MTV and other networks began re-airing original "Monkees" episodes. Jones' other notable contributions to pop culture include pioneering the sashay dance that Axl Rose would later become known for, a memorable cameo on a "Brady Bunch" episode and serving as the reason that David Bowie (who was born David Jones) took up a stage name. PAT HEALY

Snooki: A little person expecting a little person?

Though she recently denied it, many news organizations are now reporting that Nicole "Snooki" Polizzi is indeed three months pregnant with boyfriend Jionni LaValle's baby. The "Jersey Shore" star is reportedly looking to make the most of the announcement — and has even brokered a deal for a cover story with Us Weekly. Apparently, Snooki is looking to use her pregnancy to become "the next Kourtney Kardashian," a source tells Page Six. But reps at MTV aren't as excited, since Snooki is currently filming a "Jersey Shore" spin-off chronicling her hard-partying lifestyle. "MTV went into crisis mode after they found out," the source says. "They're trying to hide it because it would greatly affect the creative direction of the show."

I laughed at this because, well, "creative direction" and "'Jersey Shore' spin-off" do not go together. But then it makes sense: MTV's programming is filled with a million bad parenting reality shows, from "Teen Mom" to "16 and Pregnant." Even they are probably loath to air a segment of Snooki taking her baby for her first spray tan.

Maybe when Snookis around the world get pregnant, their babies gestate in their cleavage?

Toni Braxton and Eddie Murphy?

Color us surprised: Toni Braxton and Eddie Murphy are dating, per Us Weekly.

Murphy

The singer, 44, and comic actor, 50, "are seeing each other and are very into it," a source tells the magazine, adding that the romance started four months ago.

Braxton's rep insists "Toni and Eddie are just friends and have been fans of each other's work for a long time." However, the insider says, "Their kids have met. ... It's getting very serious."

Talking points

Garner's baby boy

Jennifer Garner gave birth to a son on Tuesday in Santa Monica, Calif. Husband Ben Affleck posted on his Facebook page that they're "happy to announce" that "Jennifer gave birth to a healthy baby boy, Samuel Garner Affleck." It's the third child and first boy for the couple, who also have daughters Violet, 6, and Seraphina, 3. Garner previously said that they knew the gender of the baby ahead of time but weren't sharing that information. "It would be so weird to have a boy," she told Ellen DeGeneres during an interview last year.

Lohan's 'SNL' comeback

Lindsay Lohan is mounting her comeback, starting with a stint hosting "Saturday Night Live" this week, and she knows there's a lot at stake. "I will not let anyone down, especially myself," she said in an interview with the "Today" show, starkly contrasting her last visit to the show, during which she denied having any problems at all. "I wasn't as comfortable with myself then. I think it was a fear factor that I had about what was really going on. And, you know, I had to get that wake-up call."

Houston biopic in the works?

Plans are reportedly already underway for a movie about Whitney Houston's life, according to the Daily Mail. Producer Clive Davis is behind the project; and while Jennifer Hudson, Vivica Fox and Jordin Sparks may be on the list for the lead role, Davis is said to have his eye on Rihanna to play Houston. And lest it seem like Davis is trying to cash in on his friend's death, the film was reportedly already being developed before Houston died last month. A source says, "Whitney knew about the project and was excited to see where it would lead."

Happy 18th birthday, Mr. Bieber — you're finally legal!

Eighteen years ago today, on March 1, 1994, a mop-headed infant by the name of Justin Bieber came tap, tap, tap, tap-dancing out of his mother's womb in Ontario, Canada. Thanks to some talent, YouTube and a certain charm that appeals to every single girl under the age of 16 the world over, the force that is Justin Bieber is now worth somewhere in the market of $85 million. In honor of his 18th birthday, we picked out some of our favorite shots of the now-legal teen idol, and wanted to show you how his look has become so prevalent — even these mug shots fell under the influence of it. Not bad for a kid who was discovered only in 2008.

10 REASONS TO HIT THE MOVIES

Must-see

▶ Oliver Cooper and Thomas Mann star in teen party flick "Project X."

1 'Project X'
The buzz has been building for what has been described as the ultimate party movie — shot handheld-style by a cast of unknowns. Like every great high school film, it's about nerds who conquer all by throwing a rager.

2 'Dr. Seuss' The Lorax'
Zac Efron and Danny DeVito voice characters in the beloved children's story about the extinction of the truffula trees.

3 'Wanderlust'
Paul Rudd and Jennifer Aniston star in this comedy about a couple who go in search of a new life on a hippie commune.

4 'Good Deeds'
Tyler Perry writes, directs and stars in this story about a man who is jolted out of his passive lifestyle by doing — wait for it — good deeds!

5 'Gone'
Amanda Seyfried plays a woman haunted by the abduction of her sister two years prior.

6 'Act of Valor'
Actual active-duty Navy SEALs star in this very-close-to-reality imagining of what it's like to be on special operations.

7 'Ghost Rider: Spirit of Vengeance'
The Nicolas Cage franchise about a man afflicted with spirit of the Ghost Rider returns.

8 'This Means War'
Two spies vie for the love of one woman.

9 'The Secret World of Arrietty'
The Japanese adaptation of the classic book "The Borrowers" boasts a voice cast that includes Will Arnett and Amy Poehler.

10 'Safe House'
Denzel Washington heads up this thriller about a highly skilled rebel CIA agent who turns the tables on his captors.

TV watch list

▶ Jason Isaacs

'Awake'

DRAMA. Jason Isaacs gives a mesmerizing performance as detective Michael Britten, who loses a family member in a car accident — but he's not sure which one. The grief is so overwhelming, he copes by creating two realities for himself: one in which his son perished, the other in which his wife is the one who died. It's a tantalizing puzzle to watch as Britten realizes he doesn't want to discover which "dream world" he's living is actual reality. For our interview with Isaacs, visit www.metro.us/television.

'Project Runway All Stars'

REALITY. Pharrell Williams — one half of music production duo The Neptunes — judges out-of-this-world styles when the designers are tasked with creating looks that literally glow. 9 p.m., Lifetime

Dating advice

Constructive coupling

She may be a matchmaker and the star of reality show for Bravo, but Lori Zaslow is no Patti Stanger, of the same cable channel's show "The Millionaire Matchmaker." In fact, Zaslow is the anti-Patti. Unlike the cattle calls Stanger has on her own show, in which she herds a group of women into an office, critiques their appearance and sends them to a mixer hosted by one millionaire looking for love, Zaslow takes a friendlier approach.

"I think we definitely have a positive approach and that people love working with us because when you're positive, people feel like they can open up," Zaslow explains, adding that her company will only do blind dates. The client never gets to choose their match.

"I think sometimes people fall into old habits and pick someone who visually is right, but they don't know anything about their insides," Zaslow explains. "We spend so much time with our clients — that's really our passion, the analyzing. We get invigorated by learning about people — what has worked for you, what hasn't worked."

On her new show, "The Love Broker," Zaslow brings the cameras with her as she coaches her clients through the process of dating in New York City — a town that's caught plenty of flack from Stanger, who once said that women in New York should "dumb it down a little bit." Zaslow is a bit more optimistic about the state of dating in her city.

"I love New York. I love the people here. I feel like maybe it's more of a challenge than in other cities because there are so many people," she says. "That's why people come here to find love and then move out of the city. People come here to meet people. I think New York's known for that. It should be the Big Heart, not the Big Apple." METRO/HP

Lori Zaslow's matchmaking show, "The Love Broker," premieres on Monday, March 5, at 10 p.m. on Bravo.

Zaslow's blind date etiquette

- Just stay for an hour
- Don't drink too much
- Talk as much as you listen, listen as much as you talk

Healthy reporting in news? Fat chance

RE: "THE SKINNY ON EATING DISORDERS": I found it quite disturbing that Metro chose to run their eating disorder piece right next to one about how Emma Stone got her "red-carpet bod." One of the reasons many women and girls suffer from low self esteem and eating disorders is that they're constantly bombarded with the idea that their worth and value to society lies in their appearance. There was also the bit on how wearing red is more attractive to men, and don't even get me started on the ads. No wonder women struggle to accept their bodies and themselves. KELSI SWANK, VIA E-MAIL

If you want to rob us, rob yourselves

Hey politicians: Give up your benefits if you are determined to take mine. You work for me, you have no right to take what I've earned and give yourself more than your employers, the voters. Corporate CEOs are eliminating earned retiree benefits. Corporate America is passing the buck again to federal and state taxpayers, who are being forced to pick up the tab for millions of newly uninsured retirees. REGINA MAHONEY, VIA E-MAIL

"[Supreme Court Justices] consider themselves above the law."

Justices Scalia and Clarence Thomas are a disgrace to the honor of the Supreme Court. They continue to hear cases where they should recuse themselves. It is outrageous that once appointed to the court they cannot be removed. They consider themselves above the law. ROBERT LA ROSA, VIA E-MAIL

Piercing infants akin to child abuse

RE: "IF YOUR CHILD WANTS EARRINGS": What if your child wants to drink beer, or wear inappropriate clothing? Some things are decisions for adults to make for themselves. Why would any parent inflict pain on an infant for such a frivolous purpose? To me, it is child abuse to pierce a sweet, innocent baby's ears. People should be able to decide for themselves whether or not they want to have holes in their heads — not whether they want scarred lobes for life. DEBORAH FENKER, VIA E-MAIL

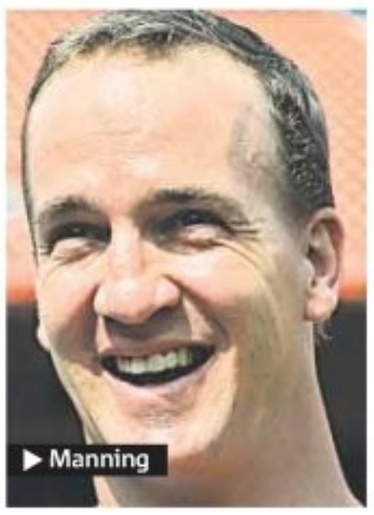
Manning up: Could Peyton be in play?

Colts QB generating buzz as March 8 approaches ◗ Medical expert thinks he should be ready, says decision is up to Manning ◗ Would Birds swoop in? Idea not that far-fetched



▶ Manning

The fans have spoken. The majority want Peyton Manning in Eagles green.

The message boards are abuzz, so too are talk radio lines. The common response to whether the Birds should sign Manning is: Why not? We got nothing to lose.

Manning underwent three procedures on his injured neck. The most recent, completed on Sept. 8, was a one-level cervical neck fusion. Basically, the surgeon removed the herniated disc, which relieved the pressure on the spine and nerves.

Dr. Andrew Hecht, co-chief of spine surgery at Mt. Sinai Hospital in New York, has never met Manning. But he has performed the one-level cervical neck fusion procedure on several big-time athletes, including college-level quarterbacks.

"Athletes who have this operation, you have no increased risk by going back to sports once they are healed," said Dr. Hecht, who is also a spine surgical consultant for the New York Jets. "If you look at all the patients that have this surgery, they would return to contact sports, almost without exception."

Dr. Hecht was quick to stress that he is basing his prognosis on his own experiences with the procedure. From what he's read about Manning's situation, the QB has been cleared to play.

"From a medical standpoint, he should be OK to play," Dr. Hecht said. "It's Peyton Manning's decision to make."

MIKE GREGER
mgreger@metro.us

Friends say Peyton plays

Coaches aren't allowed to observe Manning until April, per the NFL's new labor agreement.

However, the Colts' medical staff is allowed since he failed his exit physical. Manning is due a $28 million option from the Colts by March 8. Or they can cut him.

Manning's teammate, Jeff Saturday, has been in contact with him.

"He'll be playing football, I can assure you that," Saturday said. "I hope it's here, but he'll be playing somewhere."

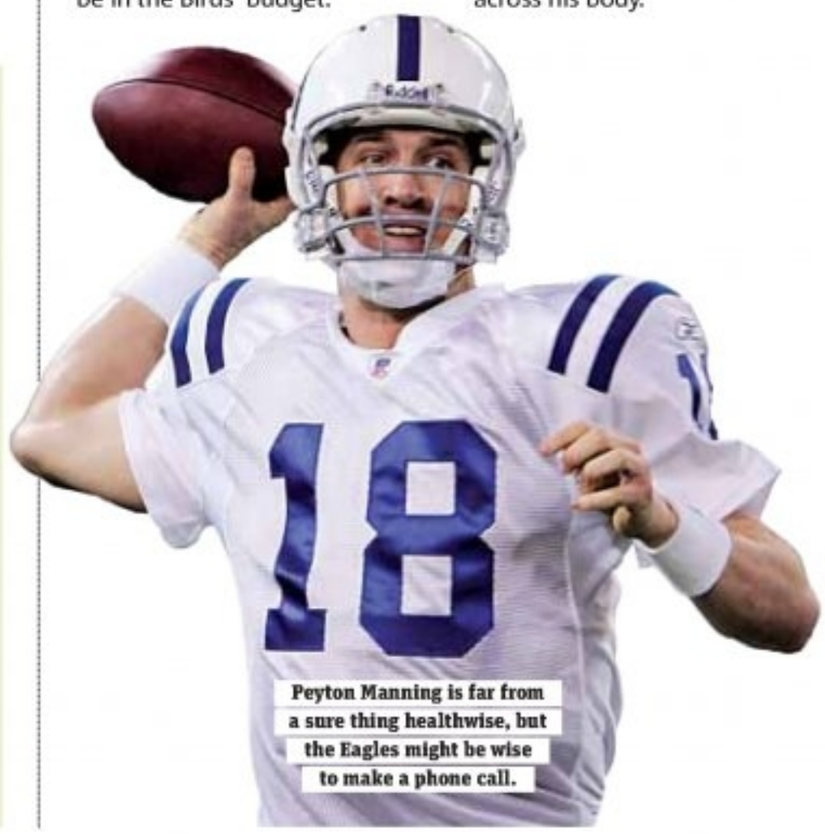
METRO

Why it makes sense for Birds

- Eagles offensive line coach Howard Mudd served in the same capacity for much of Manning's tenure in Indy. Mike Vick has struggled at times picking up Mudd's system, especially making calls at the line of scrimmage.
- Andy Reid comes under fire for his game-day coaching — from wasting timeouts, not deviating from his "script," to not making halftime adjustments. Manning has always run flawless offenses and serves as coach on the field. He could shield Reid's flaws.
- If the Colts do indeed cut Manning by March 8, the Eagles wouldn't have to give up anything to get him. There is the tricky thing of figuring out what to pay him — he's due $28 million — but an aging QB coming off a very serious injury might be in the Birds' budget.

Why it doesn't make sense

- Eagles signed Mike Vick to a six-year, $100 million deal last August. While the team can opt out of the contract after next season, the Birds would eat a $7 million signing bonus. And then they'd either have to find a trading partner or convince Vick to be a backup. Good luck.
- Reid has been drooling over No. 7 since his days in Atlanta and now he has him in his stable. It would be really hard to see Reid giving up on his reclamation project. After all, Vick all but promised Big Red a ring last season.
- No one knows how healthy Manning is, or if he can ever be the Super Bowl-winning QB he once was. It's already been reported that Manning's velocity is down and he has been having trouble throwing to his left and across his body.



Peyton Manning is far from a sure thing healthwise, but the Eagles might be wise to make a phone call.

Fantasy sports

ADAM LEVITAN
ALEVITAN@METRO.US

2.1 Average yards after contact for Cedric Benson last season, tied for last in the NFL. The Bengals are expected to address the RB spot in the draft.

DON'T BLOW IT

We can't win our baseball league with a first-round draft pick. We certainly can lose it.

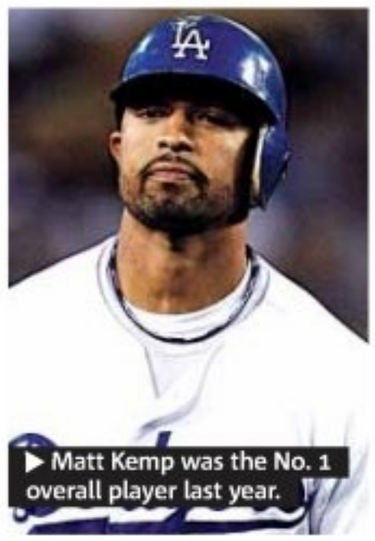
Seeking major upside from unproven players is the way to gain an edge in the middle and later rounds. Up front, we want a sure thing.

Scary studs

Matt Kemp is going No. 1 in a ton of leagues, mostly because he was No. 1 player by a wide margin last season. Kemp is one year removed from a .249 average and 19 steals. NL West is also a pitcher-friendly division. Avoid.

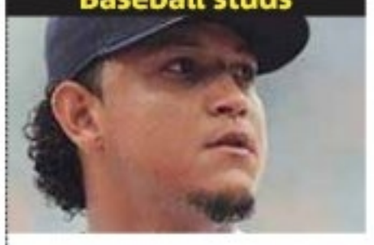
Prince Fielder is scary because he got a $214 million contract, is changing leagues and calls a pitcher's park home. A letdown is possible.

We also have to be concerned with players that have career seasons at age 30. Curtis Granderson has been a favorite thanks to his power/speed, but no one should expect 41 homers.



▶ Matt Kemp was the No. 1 overall player last year.

Baseball studs



Miguel Cabrera

1B, Tigers
One of the game's best natural hitters now has Prince Fielder for added lineup protection. He can't fail.

Troy Tulowitzki

SS, Rockies
Injuries always a concern, but playing in Colorado at the thin shortstop spot is unique.

Hoops pickups

Options off the wire:

1 Josh Howard, SF, UTAH — Howard has earned the starting gig as he's finally over his ACL tear. We know he can score 13-16 points nightly.

2 Jordan Crawford, SG, WAS — Nick Young is an impending free agent, meaning the Wiz are going to take a long look at Crawford.
